Design and Control of Capacitor-Supported Dynamic Voltage Restorer for Mitigation of Power Quality Disturbances

Mohan Tasre, Gajanan Dhole, Saurabh Jadhao, and Rajesh Sharma

Abstract Voltage sag contributes majorly in the stalling industrial processes which further incur the economic loss. The dynamic voltage restorer has emerged as an efficient technology for sag mitigation. The capacitor-supported dynamic voltage restorer is the cost-effective solution that mitigates sag problem. This work describes the capacitor-supported DVR architecture along with analysis of its compensation technique mathematically. Further, the simplified methodology adopted for specification determination of major components is explained. The time-domain control algorithm with required transformations is explained. The adopted design and control strategy of is justified by observing DVR performance with ideal and practical power system conditions.

Keywords Point of common coupling · Voltage sag · Total harmonic distortion · Voltage unbalance factor

1 Introduction

Engineering researches have modernized the generation, transmission as well as distribution sectors of power system. At distribution level, the distribution feeder is under shear stress due to varied load connected on them. Similarly, at consumer end, electrical load employed for industrial, commercial, and domestic sectors undergone

Abstract- In multilevel inverters, obtaining solution to the selective harmonic elimination equation is really difficult and time consuming. Secondly, finding global optimum solution is also challenging. In this paper, new improved proposed optimization algorithm is presented. As Compared to other optimization algorithms, it will enhance the computational speed and chances for finding global solution will be more. Also it will escape the solution from sticking into local optima. This proposed algorithm mainly targets at adaptive adjustment control of pheromone and updation of active evaporation factor. In this, pheromone deposition factor and ant's movement is improved and making it convenient for solving large scale problems. Hence this proposed algorithm is applied for solving nonlinear transcendental equation which not only provides the optimized solution for switching angles but it will reduce the lower order harmonics and THD also. The various simulated and experimental results shown in the paper proves the effectiveness of proposed algorithm for finding the global optimum solution with high convergence speed.

Keywords- Adaptive control pheromone; Ant colony optimization; Active evaporation factor; Selective harmonic elimination; Multilevel Inverter; Total harmonic distortion.

I. INTRODUCTION

The ACO algorithm with its several advantages is widely used in solving many combinatorial optimization problems. It has positive feedback for obtaining rapid solution, dynamic applications, metaheuristics search characteristics, robustness, Inherent parallelism implementation etc. Hence gradually it becomes the emerging field in solving optimization algorithms [1]-[3]. First it was used in problem of quadratic assignment [4], problem of job scheduling [5], to solve traveling salesman problem [6] and so on. In spite of many advantages, it has shortcomings too i.e., maximum searching time, very slow speed of convergence, premature convergence for complex problems and so on. Many researchers proposed improved ACO algorithms to overcome these shortages. ACO with active pheromone updation and cell scheduling is proposed by Leng et al. for flexible manufacturing process to reduce cost and time [7]. Yang and Lai proposed improved ACO for p/T (p/T-ACO) for solving practical large scale problems [8]. Xu et al. suggested chaotic map for hybrid algorithm for enhancement of basic the ACO algorithm and to solve VRP problems [9]. Combination of ant colony algorithm with particle swarm algorithm is applied to solve traveling salesman problem (TSP) by Walid et al.[10]. Extended ant colony algorithm to implement regulation policy for controlling each type of ant during search process is presented by Escario et al.[11]. New GACO ant colony algorithm to compute Unified Device Architecture is presented by Li and Jin [12]. This paper presents, improved new ant colony optimization (NEWACO) algorithm which is an efficient and intelligent algorithm applied to solve nonlinear selective harmonic elimination equations which are transcendental in nature to obtain the optimized solution for switching angles in single phase H-Bridge 7 level multilevel inverter. With these solutions, Total Harmonic Distortion (THD) will also reduce to a great extent which proves the effectiveness of proposed algorithm.

II. Formulation of SHE Equations

Fig.1 shows bipolar output voltage waveform in inverters. From Fourier series, the output voltage equation can be obtained and is by equation (1). This equation is a nonlinear transcendental equation which contains trigonometric terms given by

Fig. 1 Bipolar Output voltage waveform

$$V_{2k+1} = \frac{4V_{dc}}{(2k+1)\pi} \sum_{i=0}^N \cos(2k+1)\alpha_i \quad (1)$$

Where, V = Inverter output voltage

$V_{dc}$  = Input voltage magnitude

$\alpha$  = Switching angles

N = Harmonic equations

k = Number of switching angles (from 0 to N-1)

Total number of harmonic equations (N) can be given by

Title: Increased theta activity after Om mantra meditation with Fourier and wavelet transform

Authors: Bhavna P. Harné; Anil S. Hiwale

Addresses: Department of Electronics, S.S.G.M. College of Engineering Shegaon, 444203, India
Department of Electronics, MIT college of Engineering, Pune, 411038, India

Abstract: In our previous study, FFT analysis has been used for spectral analysis of the EEG signal to investigate the effect of Om mantra meditation. It was proved that this mediation plays a role in providing relaxation. In the present study, we continued our work with wavelet analysis to firmly establish this benefit. Two-way repeated measures ANOVA was used on relative power obtained by FFT and DWT. The comparative results of both methods are presented. The same increasing and decreasing pattern of relative power are observed in each band with FFT and DWT. An increase in theta power in all regions of the brain has been observed with both the methods. Raised theta is a sign of deep relaxation. The study confirms that this 30 minutes of Om mediation offers relaxation; then it could be the way to de-stress if adopted as a daily routine.

Proposed Project From Client

(Enterprise Management using E-Commerce)

It is well recognized that small-medium enterprises (SMEs) are significant to the worldwide socio-economic development. It is even viewed that SMEs are the backbone of the economy. SMEs have also contributed significantly in higher growth of employment, output, promotion of exports, and fostering entrepreneurship. Along with the growth of the Internet, it is noted that since e-commerce was born in 1995 both the B2C (business to consumer) and B2B (business to business) e-commerce have been growing exponentially. The proliferation happens not only in the developed countries, but also in developing countries.

The growth of e-commerce means business opportunities for SMEs. SMEs may develop and operate small to medium size of B2B, B2C or C2C (consumer to consumer) e-commerce systems. SMEs may start up new e-commerce business. Those who already run "off-line" business can go online to access new markets and overcome distances. As going online require management changes, the SMEs have the advantage of implementing strategic and organizational changes much more quickly and at lower cost than large companies.

The remuneration started from 5,000/- to the team and will get increased as per the specification and modification proposed by client with separate modules development

Hoping for the best to come for making the future brighter and positive reply from your end.

Thanks & Regards
